INCOME APPROACH

This approach first determines the income producing capacity of a property by utilizing contract rents on leases in place and by estimating market rent from rental activity at competing properties for the vacant space. Deductions then are made for vacancy and collection loss and operating expenses.

DIRECT COMPARISON APPROACH

The Direct Comparison Approach utilizes sales of comparable properties, adjusted for differences, to indicate a value for the subject property. Valuation is typically accomplished using a unit of comparison such as price per square foot of building area, effective gross income multiplier or net income multiplier. Adjustments are applied to the unit of comparison from an analysis of comparable sales, and the adjusted unit of comparison is then used to derive a value for the subject property.

COST APPROACH

The Cost Approach is based upon the proposition that an informed purchaser would pay no more for the subject property than the cost to produce a substitute property with equivalent utility. This approach is particularly applicable when the property being appraised involves relatively new improvements which represent the highest and best use of the land; or when the relatively unique or specialized improvements are located in the site for which there exists few improved sales or leases of comparable properties.
